Interview with Bruna Santos

Santos: "Brazilian diplomacy therefore needs to carefully separate two layers: defending the principles of the UN Charter and pragmatically managing the relationship with the US."

In an analysis by Deutsche Welle, U.S. military action against Nicolás Maduro is presented as a critical test of Brazil's foreign policy—one that compresses long-standing diplomatic principles and current geopolitical constraints into a single moment. Bruna Santos, director of the Brazil Program, argues that the challenge facing Brasília is not one of rhetorical balance but of strategic calibration.
